“And our sherpa helped us climb a shortcut so we could zip to our hotel without the group for our first anniversary.”

- Jesse Van Oudenaren

As you catch your first glimpse of the buttes, mesas and valleys of the main gorge and gaze into the abyss, you'll understand why the Grand Canyon is one of the greatest wonders of the world. Take in its enormity from atop Red Rock. And bask in the heart-stopping joy of reaching the summit of your own volition.

A few highlights

- Two nights in a luxury cabin, with fireplace, Jacuzzi and 500 thread-count sheets
- A certified, medically-trained rock climbing guide
- Indulgent massages at Canyon Lodge's premier spa facilities after a day of climbing
- Picnics en route, with delicacies such as chilled guinea hen, olives and cheeses
- Four course dinner complemented by Napa Valley's finest vintages
- Discover the area's unique flora and fauna, including the Joshua Tree

We totally got into sport climbing mode

24 Feb 06 – Carlos Moreno

The pitch in this region is a bit sandy at first but short and not bad at all. And then the final 5.11 pitch, I started it on the crack above the belay, but after reviewing the four bolts on the slab above, I left my entire rack on the large ledge and got into sport climbing mode.

Anyone else drop haul and just climb for the feeling of freedom? Not always easy to do in a group thing, which is what made this Tile so freakin' amazing.

Tips for high altitudes

19 Feb 06 – Samantha Bissex

When planning a trip into high country, make sure you pack some winter clothing and warm sleeping gear. You might be in your glory on a sunny 80°F day, but by the time dusk rolls around you may be able to See your breath. Rapid temperature drops don't always wait for nightfall either. You might start out in warm sunshine, and find yourself wanting to huddle by a campfire to keep warm just a few hours later. It is best to dress in layers. It is much easier to take a layer off when warm than warm up if under dressed.

Newbie now addicted!!!

19 Feb 06 – Lance Davidson

My first mountain climbing experience was with this Tile. It makes those indoor rock climbing walls feel like the McDonalds of climbing. Fake fake fake! I never knew I could be so physically exhausted and yet utterly pampered at the same time. I've got a dilemma now between doing this Tile again next year, or trying a new one...

I think I'm not as experienced as you guys. I was able to stay with the group while feeling that freedom thing you discribed. Totally cool!!! Awesome man. The views every which way was killer.

Really? I didn't get that at all. I found that our group leader, Rick, kept us on a really short leash. It was good for my teenage nephews, but I wanted to get out and test my climbing abilities a bit. If I take a trip without my family, it won't be this one. But it's great for families or up to intermediate climbers.

Thanks for all your descriptions. I'm thinking of taking this trip in the next few months. I have some experience, but not a lot, so I now know that I can probably handle the climb, yet feel like I actually got to relax on my vacation, too. I'm notorious for needing to go back to work for a rest from my holiday! ha ha!

Q: When you've got water stuck in your ear, how do you get it out?

A: I put a warm smooth rock against my ear to slowly draw the water out

Q: What did you dream about last night?

A: My recurring dream of flying. This time I was flying across the sands and over the pyramids of Egypt. Usually I fly around mountains I want to climb, like Everest some day, so this one was a little different for me.

Q: Try writing your name with your other hand. Where was that person raised?

A: Nantucket
